I just ate avocado. And I liked it. (Sssshhh!)

The Texas Tuna Melt is shockingly incredible! Whoever heard of a tuna melt with barbecue sauce, bacon, and avocado? Not me! However, despite the combination being a little on the odd side, I think I just found a new favorite!

I haven't tried avocado in years, with the last encounter being not so pleasant. I've never liked avocado, and I wasn't sure I was going to like this, but I'm always up for trying new things. I'm glad I did.

I think I have a new favorite lunch destination. And they're two buildings down from me. My happiness levels are through the roof right now!

I would like to take this opportunity to thank my coworker, Scott, for telling me about this place. MMMMMMMMMMMM!!!!

Good lunch grub, great prices.

Wraps are BIG and only $6.25 for a whole or $3.95 for a half. That way if you can't decide you can grab a half of 2 different sangos. Which is exactly what I did – a chicken cordon bleu and a steak fajita. Nice. Great way to spice up lunch and get some variety. Fajet came w/ salsa on the side and the other guy came with some good spicy honey mustard to dip dip dip.

Good selection of combos...almost anything you can think of. You can construct your own from the ingredients list too if that strokes you.

They also have a quick-stop takeaway fridge with pre-made wrapperinos if it's busy and you don't have time to wait. My wait wasn't bad at all and the joint was JUMPIN!

Good to see a new lunch option down here, maybe they'll force Grassroots to lower their outrageous prices.....BURN!

They've got salads and other healthy options too so you don't feel Roly Poly after eating here.

mind BLOWN. finally! a healthy, fresh, delicious offering in this area! it's february, yet roly poly has green lettuce and avocado, red tomatoes, vibrantly orange carrots. all of these ingredients are the proper consistency and actually have flavor. it's like when you have one of those super vivid dreams where, when you wake up, you feel like it's real. this one is real, kiddos. this one is real.

to back myself up on the avocado thing: it was perfectly brightly colored, which i cannot say about an eatery a few doors down. this particular place, which i will not name but is closing within the next few days (haha, i may as well name it), had pre-sliced avocado in line with all their other sandwich ingredients the other day. the avocado was brown and shriveled-looking, if avocado can shrivel. shit. anyway, the "nutty avocado" is amazing because the avocado is at perfect ripeness. yay!

it's absolutely thrilling that there's a place in the area now that has GOOD food for cheap prices. the wraps are super inexpensive and the half wrap is actually pretty filling if you're also grabbing a bag of chips or something. there are SO many choices, but you can also make your own from a list of approximately 329847243 options. they have those check box form things so you can pick your items and hand the list off. this is helpful if you're anything like me and you have a brain shart when it comes time to make a custom order.

a great feature to roly poly is that they have premade wraps. you can tell they haven't just been sitting around. actually, when i was in there, an employee was checking on the wraps in the cooler. i'm thinking they keep a really good eye on the quality of their products and would pull anything that was unsatisfactory, but don't quote me on this. what's great is that they don't just have super standard, boring wraps premade. you know how some places have premade stuff but it's like, a chef salad or a plain old roast beef sandwich or tuna salad or some shit that i don't like? they actually have interesting options for the grabbing and going. this is probably because all their sandwiches are interesting.
